attached to the rear of the tube where the 11mm dovetail scope grooves are cut directly into the spring tube. The spring pipe is so thin that the binocular rail must be connected separately with screws. What you can't see is the threaded end cover. The R1 R10 has a threaded tip cover as well, so the rifle was dismantled exactly the same way. This cover must have caused production problems due to the thin tube. How many tubes broke when the yarn machine broke? I don't know, but I know that when the R10 went in 1995, the R9 used a final cap held by 4 tabs that followed it. Trigger top-end Weihrauch rifles are just as R10/HW 85 Rekord trigger. Now legendary this trigger was a major feature of weihrauch spring weapons. This means record-breaking automatic security When the rifle is cocked the bow-loaded safety pimi tip goes out on the left side of the lid, putting the rifle safely. The rifle I examined is the one I got from reader David Enoch at the 2017 Texas air gun show. The trigger and security are gold-plated because David's brother, Bryan, has this rifle set. Actually, it's the melody I really get. I can't wait to start testing! Description HW 85 I'm examining for you a .22 caliber breakbarrel single shot pellet rifle. It is 45-3/4-inch long overall, with a 19-5/8-inch barrel. The R10 stock ends the stock behind the pivot bolt, which went to the end of the base block - another two inches further away. This is the most important difference between the two models. The rifle weighs 2.5 kilos on his nose. The weight varies slightly, according to the weight of the wood stock, and on this heavy side. The weight of an R10 ad is 7.9 lbs. Weihrauch rifle stocks usually end up bolting pivot, instead of extending to the end of the base block. Stock This wood stock has no checkers, it would have an R10 checkered pistol grip. Monte Carlo has an elevated comb, but there's no raised cheek part the R10 can have. Wood beech and medium finished dark brown. The butt pad is soft rubber with a grip both for your shoulder and when you stand on your butt. Sights like the R10, the 85 came with an adjustable rear view and a sphere front view that accepts inserts. The rifle came to me with a pre-square post, but having owned many Weihrauchs over the past 25 years, I have the rest of the attachments. Summary This is the rifle so far. If you are a reader you are with me at any time you know this is a very special air gun. I bought it for the amazing melody. I can't wait to test it for you - and for me! Me!
